Methodology to Identify slow, average and fast learners

We have set Performance Thresholds to identify slow, average and fast learners across the four semesters of PG Course in Psychology. Students consistently scoring above 85% are considered "fast learners," students scoring between 65% and 85% are "average learners," and students scoring below 65% are "slow learners." We also Evaluate the consistency of student performance across different semesters by seeing their performance in completing the assignments.
